Bamberg Shows Sorrow For Fresh Desecration Of Jewish Graves

West German police took special steps to insure the safety of Bamberg's one hundred remaining Jews and their property in the wake of a vicious outbreak of anti-Semitism. City officials and residents began demonstrations of public atonement for the anti-Jewish outrages. Visiting Americans had discovered that vandals had desecrated twenty-three tombstones in Bamberg's ancient Jewish cemetery with yard-high Swastikas and slogans, says the New York Herald Tribune, reading: "Jews Go To Hell," "Long Live Der Fuehrer"; and "Six Million Jews Were Too Few," a reference to the Jews killed by the Nazis.

Vandals had smeared a swastika and the words "Death to the Jews" at a memorial tablet marking the site of the Damberg synagogue, razed November 9, 1938, the infamous "Kristallnacht" (Crystal Night), when hundreds of synagogues throughout Germany were destroyed by Hitler's storm troopers.

Black, crepe-draped flags flew at half staff throughout the Bavarian city to show sorrow for the desecrations, and dozens of homes had crepe in their windows.

Lord Mayor Theodor Mathieu ordered the city's church bells to toll for ten minutes at 8 p.m., and he called the 43,000 Bambergers to a rally of "public atonement." Residents signed their names to statements of protest drawn up in City Hall.

Rewards for information leading to the arrest of the vandals reached $8,250. One $750 reward was offered by the newspaper, Frankischer Tag, which declared in an editorial: "In the name of Bamberg we plead for forgiveness."

The cemetery desecrations were discovered by Dr. Michael Wach-

REFORM RABBI WHO CONVERTED TEMPLE INTO "JEWISH HUMANISTIC CONGREGATION", WORD "GOD" OMITTED, SHAKES CONVENTION

The rabbi who asserted several months ago that he did not understand the "meaning of the term God" received both understanding and criticism, at the convention of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, held in Cincinnati, Ohio. Backed by his congregation of 145 families, 36-year-old Rabbi Sherwin Wine eliminated the word God from his religious service. He is the religious leader of Temple Birmingham, in the Birmingham suburb of Detroit.

Rabbi Wine converted his temple into what he described as a "Jewish humanistic congregation functioning within the framework of American Reform Judaism, with emphasis on the ethical imperatives and historical experience of Judaism."

Although his assertions did not come up on the agenda of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the Reform rabbinic group that ended its 76th annual convention, says Irving Spiegel, in the New York Times, the issue was talked about in corridors, over dinner, and at the end of various sessions of the convention.

In interviews with the New York Times, the rabbis voiced an understanding of the concept but were critical of what they said was Rabbi Wine's "dogmatic rejection" of the Judaic religious tradition and historic experience, which they said had as its core the centrality of God.

On the other hand, tribute to Rabbi Wine and his congregants as a "very sincere, intelligent group of people" was expressed by Dr. Eugene Mihaly, professor of Homiletics and Rabbinic Literature at Hebrew Union College. Dr. Mihaly was a teacher of Rabbi Wine and assisted in his installation as rabbi of the Detroit congregation.

Some said that Rabbi Wine's search for God might not be far apart from Job's stand when he said, "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him."

At the time of the establishment of his congregation last year, Rabbi Wine asserted that "If religion is to be viable in the modern age, it must adapt its pursuit of the truth to the empirical method."

He said that if "we apply this criterion to the issue of the word God we must then ask what empirical evidence exists to establish the truth of the statement, 'There is a God.'" He then held that "If there is no empirical evidence that could possibly establish either the truth or the falsity of the statement, then the statement is meaningless."

Elaborating on this in an interview, Rabbi Wine said that a "Theist, an atheist, and an agnostic all believe the statement that there is a God." "However," he added, "they do not use empirical criteria for this assertion."

He termed himself an "ignostic," explaining that an "ignostic" is "one who says that the statement 'There is a God' is meaningless by empirical criteria."

Rabbi Wine explained that the empirical method required two things:

"One, that all statements of belief must be continually tested by the evidence of human experience; and secondly, that no statement of belief can be dogmatically fixed since it is always subject to refutation by future experience." Referring to the elimination of the word God from his service, he said, according to the New York Times, "The reason for this was not that we wish to deny the existence of God but we couldn't honestly use such an emotionally charged word in our service unless we clearly understood its meaning."

As a substitute, Rabbi Wine said that he preached "humanism," describing this as a religion "because, like all other religions, it enables man to relate himself to his universe." He also said he placed emphasis on the ethical imperatives of Judaism.

Rabbi Wine appealed for an "open and honest discussion of those issues that trouble us personally," saying that "unless we can freely verbalize our religious anxieties, Judaism cannot save the Jewish people."

"I still consider myself a rabbi because I am a teacher," he said.

DAVID SELZNICK, THE PRODUCER, WAS A TOWERING FIGURE IN MOVIE INDUSTRY WHERE HIS FATHER WAS LEGENDARY; ENORMOUSLY GIFTED, MERCURIAL, TIRELESS WORKER, DEVOTED TO QUALITY, TASTE, LITERATURE, KNOW-HOW

David O. Selznick, one of the leading producers in the motion picture industry, died of a coronary occlusion at Mount Sinai Hospital, in Beverly Hills, Cal.

Mr. Selznick, who was sixty-three years old, was stricken in the office of his lawyer, Harry Brannen, in Beverly Hills and was rushed to the hospital. His wife, Jennifer Jones, was with him at the time of the attack, says the New York Times. Mr. Selznick, who produced "Gone With The Wind," the movies' biggest money-maker, and his wife had returned to their Beverly Hills home after spending three months in New York City.

Mercurial, shrewd, self-confident and, of course, enormously gifted, David O. Selznick climbed to the pinnacle of power and success in Hollywood with films that are now classics and actors who are considered screen immortals.

His films included: "Intermezzo"; "Rebecca"; "David Copperfield"; "Little Women"; "The Prisoner Of Zenda"; "Dinner At Eight"; "A Star Is Born"; "Duel In The Sun"; and, the epic, "Gone With the Wind."

He was instrumental in spurring the careers of such actors as Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Ingrid Bergman, Joseph Cotten, Gregory Peck, Katharine Hepburn, Joan Fontaine, Fred Astaire, Leslie Howard, Myrna Loy, and his wife, Jennifer Jones.

Mr. Selznick, a six-foot one-inch 200-pounder, moved quickly, spoke rapidly, and worked tirelessly. He produced quality films with three trademarks: top stars, the finest writers, and no expense spared.

Even in the twilight of his career, he remained wide-eyed and even brash, although a trace of pessimism and melancholy became apparent in recent years.

"Nothing in Hollywood is permanent," Mr. Selznick said in 1959 on a Hollywood set, as Tara, the mansion built for "Gone With The Wind," was being dismembered and shipped to Atlanta, Georgia, says the New York Times. "Once photographed, life here is ended. It is almost symbolic of Hollywood. Tara has no rooms inside. It was just a facade. So much of Hollywood is a facade."

Mr. Selznick spoke in quick, staccato sentences. He was one of the most famous memo writers in Hollywood — once sending a message to Vivien Leigh that weighed half a pound. It took the actress ten days to reply to it. Mr. Selznick was sentimental, extravagant, and, at times, emotional.

Mr. Selznick's preoccupation with quality and his perfectionism led to many fights with directors.

"Gone With the Wind" started with George Cukor directing. He was replaced by Victor Fleming.

"A Farewell To Arms" saw a classic feud between Mr. Selznick and John Huston. "It was a case of one Alp and two Hannibals," said Mr. Huston after he had been replaced in Italy by Charles Vidor.

"I asked for a violinist," Mr. Selznick shot back, "and, instead, in John, got a soloist."

Mr. Selznick was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., on May 10, 1902, the son of Lewis J. Selznick, a Russian immigrant who had earned and lost a fortune in the movie business.

With unbounded confidence in the abilities of his two sons, Myron and David, the elder Selznick spared little expense in rearing them as prodigals. Myron, who later became a Hollywood agent, was given an allowance of $1,100 a week at the age of twenty-one. The younger, David, was given $300 a week at eighteen.

David Selznick was educated in both public and private schools and at Columbia University. He developed an interest in film-making in his early teens.

The Selznick family fortune was swept away in the stock market crash. L. J. (as he was called in Hollywood and New York) moved from a 22-room apartment on Park Avenue to three furnished rooms where Mrs. Selznick did the cooking, says the New York Times. All the family possessions, including her jewels, were sold.

With zest and self-confidence, the younger Selznick got his first movie job by cajoling Harry Rapf, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, into hiring him, nominally as a reader of scripts at $100 a week at a two-week trial. Mr. Rapf had initially protested. "Readers don't get that kind of money," he said.

"I know they don't," Mr. Selznick retorted. "But I'll do more for you than read scripts. I'll help you fix them. I'll write titles. I'll do everything that has to be done to them."

Mr. Rapf hired him. Within several weeks, Mr. Selznick's pay was doubled and he was given a permanent job. A few months later, his salary was increased to $800 and he was appointed Mr. Rapf's assistant on the production of the Tim McCoy Western films.

Mr. Selznick next went to Paramount, offering himself on a similar trial arrangement. He received a $300 job and became an assistant B. P. Schulberg, head of the studio, who had told him early:

"You're the most arrogant young man I've ever known."

In April, 1930, Mr. Selznick married Miss Irene Mayer, Louis B. Mayer's younger daughter. Mr. Mayer, the head of M-G-M, was furious when the young Selznick courted his daughter. He even refused to speak to him at the wedding.

Shortly afterward, however, when the young man walked away from his job at Paramount, Mr. Mayer did have a few words to say to his new son-in-law: "How dare you give up that contract," he yelled. "And you married to my daughter."

Mr. Selznick left Paramount to make films, and later, became the vice-president, in charge of all production at R.K.O.-Radio. It was there that he started producing such quality films as "A Bill Of Divorcement," says the New York Times, for which he brought Katharine Hepburn and George Cukor, the director, to Hollywood; "The Animal Kingdom," with Ann Harding; and the famous "King Kong."

After planning, "Little Women," Mr. Selznick resigned from R.K.O. to return to his father-in-law's studio, M-G-M, as vice-president and head of his own production unit. Mr. Selznick was greeted coolly by most of the executives there. Many felt that he was using his relationship with Mr. Mayer to get ahead.

"The son-in-law also rises," became one of the gags around Hollywood at the time.

In an incident related by Bosley Crowther, film critic for The New York Times and author of "The Lion's Share," Mr. Selznick was treated so coldly by M-G-M executives that, at one point, he went home, threw himself on the bed and cried. His wife comforted him, reports the New York Times. "Let them yammer," she said. "You can still take the best that the studio has to work with. Serve your term — and make some films!"

A two-page interview with David O. Selznick, producer of Hollywood's greatest money-maker, "Gone With the Wind," appeared in the Hollywood Reporter, a movie trade paper, the day he died. "Come Home, DOS, the industry needs you," the interview ended.

DOS, sixty-three, died at Mount Sinai Hospital in Hollywood after a heart attack. He was a towering figure in Hollywood and perhaps the greatest of the independent film producers, says the New York Herald Tribune. In recent years he had been inactive.

He became ill in the office of his attorney, Harry Brannen, in Beverly Hills. Jennifer Jones, the award-winning actress who was his wife, was with him, and accompanied him to the hospital in an ambulance. The hospital report, based upon information from Mr. Selznick's doctor, listed a coronary attack as the probable cause of death.

Mr. Selznick's initials were known wherever movies were made because he was almost equally famous for his voluminous memorandums — many signed DOS — which he fired off to his hired help during the making of a film. He was a perfectionist and the memo system was his method. They sometimes drove actors and directors out of their minds.

In the making of Hemingway's, "A Farewell To Arms," in 1957, Mr. Selznick wrote 10,000 memorandums, from 30 pages to a single sentence in length, and their subject matter ran the gamut from a discourse on the intent of Mr. Hemingway in writing the book on which the film was based, to the coiffure of Miss Jones, the film's co-star with Rock Hudson.

Mr. Selznick often boasted that he was an impossible man. But many who knew him well found him engaging and warm. He was large, with a mane of thick gray hair, and his talk, like his memos, was often an intense outpouring of ideas, plans, experiences, and judgements, says the New York Herald Tribune. There were few dull moments with DOS around.

Hollywood and other movie capitals were somewhat in awe of him. As a young man, he had been so in awe of his father, Lewis J. Selznick, a Russian immigrant jeweler who became one of the imperishable legends of the movie industry, that he could not phrase his thoughts and so had taken to writing the memos.

In Hollywood it had long been a psychoanalytical cliche that David Selznick owed much of his drive and thrust to the failure of his father. The elder Selznick, a pioneer in the film industry, had the attributes of a financial wizard, gambler, and pirate, and died broke in 1933 after becoming the leader of a $23 million business.

Lewis Selznick's second son and DOS's brother was Myron, who for many years was one of Hollywood's foremost talent agents and one of the wealthiest men on the coast. Myron died in 1944.

The great fame of "Gone With The Wind," which had its world premiere in Atlanta in 1939, too often obscured the fact that DOS had made other great pictures.

"Gone With the Wind," now in its tenth reissue, usually grosses $4 to $5 million every time it's reissued. To date it has earned $60 million. It cost about $4 million to make.

Many critics preferred "Rebecca" to "Gone With The Wind" and this always irritated Mr. Selznick. "That makes me furious," he said "It (GWTW) was such a stupendous undertaking. Anything else, no matter what we'll ever make, will always seem insignificant after that."

"GWTW" and "Rebecca" both won Oscars for Mr. Selznick. Both, as well as other films, were produced by Selznick-International, which was formed in 1935 with the backing of John Hay Whitney, and a group of bankers, says the New York Herald Tribune. Mr. Selznick and Mr. Whitney and his group each owned 42 per cent of the stock.

A funeral service for David O. Selznick was held at the Church of the Recessional, Forest Lawn Memorial-Park, Glendale. A eulogy was read during the service by the actor, Joseph Cotten. Mr. Cotten appeared in several Selznick pictures, including "Duel In The Sun" and "Portrait Of Jenny."

The service was led by Rabbi Max Nussbaum, of Hollywood's Temple Israel, of which Mr. Selznick was a member. Burial was in the Selznick family vault in Forest Lawn, where Mr. Selznick's mother, Mrs. Florence Selznick, and his brother, Myron Selznick, are buried.

The funeral was open to the public.

Tributes poured in from the leaders of the film industry. Jack L. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, said: "David O. Selznick stood as a symbol of the best in the motion picture industry. As much as any other single man, he helped bring greatness to the screen through artistry, perception, and an unrelenting desire to make fine entertainment. The industry has lost one of its geniuses in his passing . . ."

Mr. Selznick is survived by his wife, the former actress, Jennifer

★ ZIONIST ORGANIZATION ★

Of Canada: Lawrence Freiman, of Ottawa, Ont., president, has been appointed a member of the committee on reorganization by Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Zionist Organization. The purpose of this committee is to study the situation of the Zionist Movement in the various parts of the world, the role it plays in the Jewish life of the different countries; to make proposals for reorganizing to more effective. The Committee, based on a decision of the 26th Zionist Congress, will have about 40 members who will meet in Geneva from August 23 to 26. After that the North American, South American, and European sections will have to work out their proposals, to be submitted to another meeting in the summer of 1966.

★Miss Sheila Silver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Silver, 8020 Birnam Street, graduated from Macdonald College, School for Teachers. In September she will continue her studies at Sir George Williams University evening classes towards the Bachelor of Arts degree.

★ FEDERATION ★

Of Jewish Community Services: Irving J. Halperin was elected president of Neighbourhood House to succeed Bernard Pesner. The YM-YWHA, Neighbourhood House, and Federation have merged. A pre-school class for trainable retarded children was inaugurated this year on a request of Federation. Neighbourhood House has been conducting two special classes for hyperactive, educable, retarded children, in cooperation with the Montreal Children's Hospital and support of the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal. Mr. Pesner said that all activity programs in Neighbourhood House Darlington centre were filled to capacity and could not meet the demand for service. A search for more suitable headquarters is under way. Nursery schools in Chomedey and Darlington were both filled to capacity during the past season. For the coming fall season, 120 children are already enrolled in the Chomedey nursery school. Neighbourhood House urban camp serves 1,000 children each summer. Other services of the agency, founded in 1927, include an all-day nursery for children of working mothers; leisure time group work; and leadership training for adolescents. Mr. Halperin has been a member of the board of trustees of Federation, and will now be a board member of Allied Jewish Community Services. He is on the national executive of the Zionist Organization of Canada; legal aid committee of Baron de Hirsch Institute; and public relations committee of Federation. Elected to serve with Mr. Halperin on the board of directors are: Mrs. Alan Finestone, first vice-president; Abe B. Gertler, treasurer; O'Connell Greenberg, secretary; Basil Ballon, Mrs. Hillel Becker, Benjamin Cohen, Sidney Cohen, Edward J. Feigin, Jack Fels, Mrs. Lawrence Finkelstein, Horace Friedman, Abe Goldberg, Eugene Gordon, Irving J. Halperin, Fred Kaufman, Myer Kirsh, Alan Kirsch, Mrs. Moses O. Kirsch, Mrs. Jack Klein, Ellis E. Leiter, Philip Kurtz, Mrs. Theodore Lande, John Loebel, Alvin Maritzer, Dr. Samuel Melamed, Mrs. Herbert Paperman, Arthur Pascal, Bernard Pesner, Mrs. Cyril Reitman, Ab Robins, Wolfe Rosenbaum, Arthur Roskies, Basil Rubin, Abe Shragie, Sydney Silverman, Mrs. Edward Sirota, Mrs. Joseph Solomon, Abe Soroka, Lionel A. ## MARRIAGES

BLUSTEIN-CRANSKY

The marriage of Miss Benita Sella Cransky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Cransky, 6665 Macdonald Avenue, to Dr. Joseph Edward Blustein, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Blustein, 4460 Beaconsfield Avenue, was solemnized at Chevra Kadisha Bnai Jacob Synagogue, on Thursday, December 3, at seven o'clock, by Rabbi David Roth, assisted by Cantor J. Rosenzweig. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of white, peau de soie, had a jacket of Chantilly lace, and skirt combined with a lace train. Her tulle illusion veil was arranged with a matching headdress; and she carried a prayer book with a white orchid, and stephanotis. She had Mrs. Sydney Presner, sister of the groom, as matron of honour, in a blue, peau de soie gown; embroidered with beadwork. She had a blue pill-box hat; and carried blue, and white carnations. Dr. Graham Berman was best man. The ushers were: David Cransky, and Stephen Cransky, brothers of the bride; Sidney Presner, brother-in-law of the groom; Mark Kaufman, Samuel Epstein, David Blustein, and Harvey Kolodny; cousins of the groom; and Jack Swift. White, and blue carnations, and pom-poms set in standards decorated the Synagogue. An orchestra played. Two hundred and forty guests were received. Mrs. Cransky, mother of the bride, wore a blue, peau de soie gown, with straight skirt and embroidered back panel. Her hat matched it. Mrs. Bluestein, mother of the groom, was in a pale blue, peau de soie gown with beaded bodice; and had a beaded crown. Each carried white orchids with her purse. Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Edward Blustein spent their wedding trip at the Nevels Country Club, in Ellenville, N. Y., the bride departing in a black, wool suit; with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 4945 Bourret Street. Here for the marriage were: Mrs. Ida Libby, aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Libby, cousins of the bride; all of Youngstown, Ohio; and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cohen, and son, Jules, cousins of the bride, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Roll out of bed and you're on the golf course at Kutsher's.

Our golf course is 400 feet away from the main building, 250 feet away from the dining room (but if you want to play in your pajamas you can't eat in them) and 280 feet away from our 2 night clubs (in case you'd rather golf than dance 'till dawn). It's a champion course: 18 beautiful holes, 3 tees at every hole, 7,157 yards long. With lush fairways, fiendish traps and greens smooth as velvet. (Good velvet.) Plus a driving range, a putting green, an abundance of electric carts... all of it presided over by PGA Pro Tony Longo — our famous Doctor of Golf.

For the family we've got Broadway entertainment, 4 bands, a teen program, day camp, night patrols, tennis, indoor and outdoor swimming... but not for you. For you we've got a nice, soft bed. With television. Who can dance after 18 holes? You?

MARRIAGES

ECHENBERG-BAIRD

The marriage of Miss Jeannette Anne Baird, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James O. Baird, 920 Thirty-Seventh Avenue, Lachine, to Howard B. Echenberg, son of Mrs. Irene Echenberg, 5650 Cote St. Luc Road, and the late Henry L. Echenberg, of Sherbrooke, Quebec, was solemnized at Temple Emanu-El, on Saturday, May 22, at half-past seven o'clock, by Dr. Harry Joshua Stern, Rabbi, assisted by Cantor Otto Staeren. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white, peau de soie gown, designed with a scoop neckline; elbow-length sleeves; and bell-shaped skirt; with a chapel train extending from the shoulders. Her short, bouffant veil of tulle illusion, was topped by a matching headdress; and she carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. The bride had her cousin, Miss Beth Blackmore, as maid of honour. She wore a white, ottoman silk gown, cut with a scoop neckline; short sleeves; and bell-shaped skirt, with a cummerbund of turquoise-blue peau de soie. She had a matching hair-bow; and carried a bouquet of white carnations, and lilies-of-the-valley. The bridesmaids were: Miss Barbara Jack, Mrs. Ronald Bercovitch, cousin of the groom; Mrs. William Durnford, and Mrs. Robert Taylor; each wearing a white, silk gown, with fitted bodice; round neckline; short sleeves; and bell-shaped skirt; with a turquoise-blue, peau de soie cummerbund; also a matching hair-bow; and carried a bouquet of white carnations, and lilies-of-the-valley. Paul Echenberg was best man for his brother. The ushers were: James Baird, brother of the bride; Stephen Landeau, Jack Singer, and Michael Stern. Standards of white chrysanthemums, and snapdragons; and pink carnations were the wedding flowers. One hundred and fifty guests were received. Mrs. Baird, mother of the bride, wore a turquoise-blue, and silver-coloured brocade gown, with a matching coat. Mrs. Echenberg, mother of the groom, was gowned in hyacinth-blue silk, with a beaded overblouse; and slim skirt. Each had a corsage bouquet of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Howard B. Echenberg spent their wedding trip in Miami Beach, Florida; and Nassau, The Bahamas; the bride departing in a pale pink dress, under a matching mohair coat; and had a corsage bouquet of pink carnations. They flew via Eastern Air Lines. They have taken up residence in Lachine. Here for the marriage were: Mrs. Nelson S. Baird, of Midland, Ont., grandmother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Weckman, and Tom, and Mary, of Midland; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon A. Wright, of Fairhaven, Mass.; Mrs. Margaret Blackmore, of London, Ont.; uncles, and aunts of the bride; James Blackmore and Miss Beth Blackmore, of London, Ont., cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hiltz, of Drummondville, Quebec; Dr. and Mrs. M. Landeau, of New York; uncle, and aunt of the groom; Stephen Landeau, of Oakland, Calif., cousin of the groom; Mrs. Arthur T. Roblin, of Toronto, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Singer, of Kitchener, Ont.; and S. Vineberg, of Sherbrooke. Mr. Echenberg is a graduate of McGill University, with the Bachelor of Arts degree; and received the Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Western Ontario, in London, Ont. Mrs. Echenberg is a graduate of Sir George Williams University, with the Bachelor of Arts degree.

BAMBERG SHOWS SORROW

tel and his wife, of Alameda, Calif. Dr. Wachtel, a native of Germany, had returned there to visit the graves of his parents, says the New York Herald Tribune. The couple, in their sixties, left Bamberg after telling detectives, "We cannot bear to stay another minute."

Two other American Jewish couples, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hirsch, of Hackensack, N. J.; and Dr. and Mrs. Martin Lang, of Los Angeles, also walked among the toppled markers and then made immediate plans to leave.

There have been anti-Semitic incidents in West Germany since the end of World War II, but the outburst in Bamberg, not far from Nuernberg, where Hitler used to hold his annual Nazi party rallies, was especially vicious.

Detectives from Munich joined local lawmakers in the search for the vandals, whom the Frankischer Tag described as a Nazi-style "hate group."

Despite the public protestations of atonement the anti-Semitic hatemongers still were at work. Roman Catholic and Protestant churchmen and editors of the city's two papers, says the New York Herald Tribune, were telephoned by an anonymous caller who told them: "Kill the Jews — we'll continue to fight. We'll continue to smear."

The Bamberg Council of Elders ordered civilian vigilante patrols set up to help reinforced police protect citizens and property against the threat of violence and arson by neo-Nazis.

Striking in darkness while police patrols concentrated on protecting Jewish landmarks, the vandals splashed a swastika and anti-Semitic slogans in violet paint on the statue of Dr. Johann Lukas Schoenlein, a Roman Catholic and Bamberg native son, who died in 1864.

"Bamberg citizens — since the war the Jews rule our city . . . Bamberg is a city of whores . . . we in Bamberg need no Jews . . . ship the crooked-leg Jews to Israel," read a placard plastered on the statue of the famed physician.

"Our citizens are enraged," Lord Mayor Theodor Mathieu told newsmen. "They demand that these Nazis, these sickminded Idiots be stopped . . . hundreds have volunteered for the citizen patrols." In response to an appeal from Mr. Mathieu, says the New York Herald Tribune, Bavarian state riot police rushed a contingent to Bamberg to join the vigilantes and local police.

CLASS IN COOKERY

MEAT LOAF

one and one-half pounds minced meat
one large onion
one-half cup water
four hard boiled eggs
one medium-sized potato
salt and pepper to taste

Add grated potato, onion, seasoning and water, and mix well. Heat a well-greased, loaf pan. Place one-half of meat mixture in pan. Press meat firmly in pan and place hard boiled eggs along centre of meat. Cover with the rest of the meat and bake in a 350 degree oven for one and one-half hours.

REFORM RABBI

"Like all reformers I select from that tradition what is religiously valuable for me."

Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein, of Chicago, newly elected president of the Central Conference, rejected Rabbi Wine's "ignosticism," saying it was not compatible with Judaism, which "for some 3,000 years has been a God-cultured religion."

In another interview, Rabbi Roland Gittelsohn, of Boston, chairman of American Reform Judaism's Commission of Jewish Education, said that the "idea of a rabbi who does not believe in God shocks even some Jewish laymen who themselves are not sure they believe in God." He added, reports the New York Times, that "many such individuals need the security of knowing that their rabbi has faith in something certain."

100 WORLD JEWISH LEADERS TO MEET IN LA SYNAGOGUE DE LA PAIX, STRASBOURG, NEW AND SPLENDID, FOURTH IN 600 YEARS

In the spring of 1945, a handful of Jews in Strasbourg, France, surveyed the remnants of their community, probed amongst the charred rubble of their once handsome synagogue and vowed to reconstruct their shattered community. This summer, twenty years later, Strasbourg's Jewry will proudly act as host to about 100 Jewish leaders who will gather in their city from July 11 to 16 for a session of the World Executive of the World Jewish Congress.

The meeting will be held in Strasbourg Jewry's showpiece, the splendid new synagogue-center, La Synagogue de la Paix, which is the fourth Jewish place of worship in Strasbourg in 600 years.

The first synagogue, located at what today is 30 Rue des Juifs, was destroyed as the Black Death plague, sweeping Europe, approached Strasbourg. A murderous mob, believing that the Jews had poisoned the city's wells razed the synagogue, cornered the Jews, and dragged them off to their own cemetery. Those who refused baptism died as human torches.

A few escaped to nearby villages. It was not until the French Revolution, granting citizens' rights to the Jews, that they returned in any numbers to Strasbourg. The building they used as a synagogue had a varied history, as a chapel, a hospital, a circus, and even a riding school. But relics of that building's synagogue usage are permanently housed in the Judaica Section of the Alsace Museum.

The community's third synagogue, built in 1898, suffered the same fate as the first; wanton destruction by arson in 1940. The blaze that swept through the magnificent building followed planned and thorough looting by the Nazis.

Decimated twice, Strasbourg Jewry rededicated itself to the task of reconstruction and in 1954, the foundation stone for the present synagogue was laid in a piece of park land on Rue de la Paix. There was no doubt as to what the synagogue's name should be.

A glittering gathering of French leaders came from Paris for the symbolic ceremony. The scroll that was placed into the earth with the cornerstone bore the signatures of President Coty, Prime Minister Mendes-France, and Minister of Reconstruction Maurice Lemaire. To these names was added a roster of national and Jewish leaders who jointly expressed the hope that the new synagogue would exist "in an era of peace and brotherhood" and that it would be "a rallying point for Jews to come and pray."

But while primarily a house of prayer, the Synagogue de la Paix is also a community center, the facilities of which will house the sessions of the World Jewish Congress Executive. For the Strasbourg synagogue is, as one of the community's leaders noted, "very different from the synagogue of old," both in concept and architectural style. He added that "by the juxtaposition of a place of prayer with accommodation designed for administration activities, for teaching, for social, cultural, and other purposes, it is a Community House, a Bet Hakneset."

Into this House of the Community Strasbourg Jews will welcome the leadership of the World Jewish Congress who will arrive in July from over thirty lands to discuss the urgent issues that face Jewry today.

What is the A. B. C. or Audit Bureau of Circulations, and what is its importance?

A. The A. B. C. is a voluntary association of major publishers, advertisers, national and local; and advertising agencies, working together to police circulation claims, and to translate them into facts.

Q. Why are circulation facts so important?

A. Circulation figures are the only honest basis on which print advertising is sold and purchased. Publishers base their prices for advertising on the amount of their circulation, and its quality. An advertiser buys circulation. A. B. C. circulation facts tell him the exact amount at any time.

Q. How does an advertiser know that this is really so?

A. A. B. C. publishers keep exact records of all circulation receipts for subscriptions and single copy sales. These can tell him, too, whether the circulation is sold without a premium, or with one, to induce payment; or whether the circulation is composed of membership in an organization; or whether it is sold on its merit alone. Was the subscription sold on a special rate? Was it paid by mail directly to the publisher, or to an agent? These are just some of the categories of subscription payments which are recorded.

Q. Why are some of these answers so important?

A. Sometimes these answers can tell an advertiser whether the subscriber needs to be coaxed into continuing, or starting. Are subscribers voluntarily buying the publication? Do they need a cut-rate or an added attraction to keep on?

Q. How are the figures checked?

A. The publisher checks his figures, and reports them twice a year to the head office of the A. B. C. These are audited once a year by travelling A. B. C. auditors, who check the names, the receipts, the printing invoices, the bank deposits, the paper used, the ink used, the postage receipts — all of these show the number of copies printed or mailed; and paid for. If an A. B. C. field auditor goes to work for a publication whose books he has audited within a year or so, there is an automatic re-audit by another auditor. An auditor does not audit the figures of any publication for more than two consecutive years.

Q. Does the A. B. C. allow past-due subscriptions?

A. The A. B. C. rules state that all subscriptions up for renewal must be paid within three months of the expiry date. The publisher must keep track of each one. These are considered paid, but not completely so, until paid in full, for the term to come.

Q. Are new subscriptions considered as paid?

A. Not until payment is received for the term in advance.

Q. What does this cost the publisher?

A. The publisher considers the membership as his investment to protect the investment of each advertiser. The publisher pays quarterly dues; the cost of the auditing done in his office, by the hour; and the cost of checking done further, at the A. B. C. head office. If further checking is needed, the publisher pays that cost, too. An auditor spends several days in the Canadian Jewish Review office each year.

Q. Are these the only costs?

A. The greatest cost to the publisher is to see that the records are kept in order and up to date. The Canadian Jewish Review addressograph plates are posted to show the date and method and amount of payment; and the date of the subscription, and the length of its term. A publication must carry on the address label all information that the auditor would need to guide him in checking. A publication which sells subscriptions on short-term, or with a premium, or in combination with other publications, for instance, will carry all that information and more, on the address label, coded in some way.

Q. What do A. B. C. reports and statements say about the Canadian Jewish Review?

A. They tell at a quick glance the provincial breakdown; the amount sold in a period; that the Canadian Jewish Review never sells a subscription on a premium; never with a cut rate; never jointly with another publication; never as part of membership in an organization.

The Canadian Jewish Review is sold on its own merits, and always has been. It has no affiliation with any organization.

A. B. C. reports and statements supply facts to advertisers. These facts need to be known for advertising money to be spent wisely and honestly.

A. B. C. publications can never guarantee results. They do guarantee readership.

The Canadian Jewish Review is in its 22nd year of supplying facts to advertisers, investing to protect investments.

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only publication reaching the general Jewish community in Canada, which can provide audited, paid, A. B. C. circulation facts and figures, for the protection of such advertiser.

Why I Defended A Nazi

By John Weisdorf, of Toronto, Assistant Provincial Director of the Ontario Legal Aid Plan

I defended a Nazi to promote the cause of civil liberties. This statement requires some explanation. Firstly, I intend to force the Federal Government to face the fact that there is at present in Canada no legislation either outlawing Nazism or declaring it a crime for any person to preach race hatred. I chose this means of drawing attention to the lack in the ardent hope that something would be done quickly to remedy it.

Anyone with a particle of common sense can see that John Beattie and his ilk will not be stopped by prosecuting him for breaking zoning by-laws. Thus, while Toronto may be able to force him to move his party headquarters from Rhodes Avenue, what is to prevent him from relocating on Yonge Street? Indeed, what is to prevent him from preaching his vicious doctrines from a town such as Flesherton, Ontario, or Fort Vermilion, Alberta, where, for all we know, the zoning by-laws are not as comprehensive as Toronto's? It should be clear, then, that I do not, in the name of freedom of speech, desire that Nazis be permitted the liberty of continuing their swinish utterances. I want them stifled, and I want them stifled immediately by means of appropriate legislation directed to that end.

Secondly, I believe that using local by-laws to prosecute individuals with whose beliefs we are not in accord could establish a precedent useful to pursue Jews as well as members of other liberal-democratic parties, if a totalitarian regime were to come to power in Canada.

A glance at recent German history may be instructive. After 1918, a Socialist government established the new Weimar Constitution. One of its clauses was Article 48 which gave the President power to suspend those clauses of the constitution guaranteeing personal liberty. It was this article which Hitler invoked at his first opportunity in 1933, after the Reichstag burning. This subsequently permitted Hitler to pass his infamous Grundesgesetz after all effective opposition to it had been removed.

It was then that truly inhuman measures were invoked against the Jews. The dangers of legal precedent are clearly evident in this episode.

Thirdly, I believe in the rule of law and justice, which according to Dr. Morris Ginsberg, the great Jewish philosopher and sociologist, means the application of certain predictable rules, impartially, which rules in themselves must not be discriminatory. My strict adherence to the rule of law is rooted in my desire to survive as a human being. If we are not governed by laws, then we no longer live in a society of men, but in a jungle inhabited only by the hunters and the hunted. Since I have no intention of being hunted and destroyed by Mr. Beattie and others of his stripe, I would, in the absence of law, be obliged to kill Mr. Beattie.

This may perhaps explain the recent occurrences in Allen Gardens. Since the Federal authorities have not yet seen fit to shut out the ravings of the Jew-haters, from the standpoint of survival, pure and simple, I am completely sympathetic to those people who found it necessary to resort to force as the only means available to silence the psychopathic threats of John Beattie.

Fourthly, since it is my duty to survive, I constantly guard against any encroachment on my civil liberties against any potential threat to my existence as a free human being. We must all be vigilant in this regard. The threat to our liberty was quite explicit in this prosecution, and yet no one was prepared to point this out. Where were the professional liberals who are so ready to leap to the defence of the sympathetic such as poets and socialists? Where were the professional defenders of civil liberty who are prepared to make indignant statements in every case of alleged police brutality?

I consider it my duty, both as a lawyer and as a member of the human race, to come to the defence of persons who are unjustly accused. Before I bow to public opinion in matters of my conscience, I will not only resign from the legal profession. I will also resign from the human race.

Five-Year Education Plan For Israel Is Aimed At Supplying Skilled Workers To Run Machines

By Haim Shachter

The problem of education in Israel, and particularly the need to bridge the educational gap between the recent arrivals, who now constitute the greater part of the country's population, and the older settlers, has occupied government's attention to an ever increasing extent over the last few years. Cognizant of the fact that education, no less than security, is the State's most pressing problem, the Israel Government has announced a five-year plan for the development of post-primary education, particularly in the country's development areas and in new immigrant towns.

While great importance attaches to increased academic education, the country's greatest need over the next ten years is for skilled workers capable of running a machine. The greatest stress, therefore, is to be laid on the expansion of vocational training in the country.

The sum of IL 100 million has been earmarked for the purpose, and 55 large-scale, post-elementary, educational institutions are to be erected by the year 1970. Eleven such schools are already under construction at such places as Kiryat Shmona, Dimona, Yahud, Kiryat Gat, Ashdod, and Kiryat Yam.

At present, there are 84 post-primary educational institutions in the development areas and in regions with a substantial new immigrant population. These schools are attended by 11,000 pupils. The number, however, is pitifully small. In the coming five years it is planned to erect an additional 55 large new schools in 37 different localities where they will incorporate existing smaller institutions.

Where is the money to come from? The Ministry of Housing is to provide a considerable share of the cost. Mifal Hapayis, the Israel Lotteries, which is an institution unique of its kind in that in the nine years of its existence it has raised IL 100 million for the country's social welfare institutions, of which sum IL 80 million has gone for education, is to provide a long-term loan of IL 50 million, at a nominal rate of interest, given in instalments of IL 10 million annually over the coming five years.

Another IL 50 million is to be raised by the Israel Education Fund, an arm of the United Jewish Appeal, which already helps to finance education for new immigrants in the country.

Forty of the 55 institutions planned will be comprehensive schools. These will offer a variety of courses, academic as well as vocational, and pupils will be able to switch from one course to another as their mental abilities and natural bents warrant. The remaining 15 institutions will consist of seven vocational training schools, three academic schools, three maritime training schools, and two boarding establishments for promising pupils from the Oriental communities.

According to forecasts, there will be 40,000 pupils in post-elementary institutions in the development areas and in the new immigrant towns in 1970, as compared with the 11,000 today.

Steps are also to be taken by the Government for the encouragement of higher education in the country generally. The present staggered-fee system for secondary schools, which enables pupils from lower income bracket families to receive secondary schooling is to be amended. Hitherto, school fees were fixed in accordance with the family's gross income; from now on they are to be reckoned according to the per capita income of each family. This will tend considerably to increase the number of pupils receiving free schooling, or paying very much reduced fees.

At present some 35% of all pupils in the post-primary educational institutions in the country enjoy exemption from school fees. In the development areas such exemption is granted to upward of 60% of the pupils. Next year the percentage of pupils granted free education is to be raised to 40%, and in the year after to 45%. By 1968, 50% of all pupils attending post-primary educational institutions throughout the country will be exempt from school fees.

This method by which the poorest 50% will be exempt from tuition fees throughout high school is regarded by government as much fairer than to make the ninth year of education free to all, as has been suggested. The Minister of Finance has expressed opposition to free compulsory secondary education in the country, maintaining that it would impose an unjust, anti-social burden on the Government, just as by the same token, Government subsidies to all agricultural producers, rich and poor alike, would be unjust.

The most pressing problem will be that of finding teachers to man the educational establishments to be set up. The Ministry of Education has already taken steps in order to overcome the shortage.

Recently, a scholarship programme for students training as teachers for post-primary institutions has been introduced. The Ministry of Education grants scholarships running into thousands of pounds to students who undertake, on completion of their training courses, to teach in institutions to which they are assigned by the Ministry.

Already there is a reserve of some 800 such students, and in this way the Ministry of Education and Culture hopes to be able to overcome the teacher shortage. In the next school year, for example, some 120 such teachers are to take up posts in the development areas.

DAVID SELZNICK, PRODUCER OF "GONE WITH THE WIND"

Jones, and by their nine-year-old daughter, Mary Jennifer Selznick. He also is survived by two sons, Lewis J. and Daniel M. Selznick. Their mother is Mrs. Irene Mayer Selznick, daughter of the late producer, Louis B. Mayer, who was divorced from Mr. Selznick in 1948.

David O. Selznick's contribution to American films — outside of his singular achievement with "Gone With The Wind" — was his taking on and giving meaning and importance to the role of creative producer, which is peculiar to Hollywood, writes Bosley Crowther in the New York Times. Where the production of motion pictures in other countries — and in the U.S., too, before the consolidation of the big studios — has been mainly under the control of the directors, who make the big decisions, in Hollywood, it has been in the hands of the producers, the liaisons with financing.

It is these men who pick the stories, oversee the preparation of the scripts, hire the casts, select the directors and designers, bird-dog the filming, and master-mind the selling campaigns, which are a large factor in American motion pictures.

It is this function, which, when fully accomplished, requires a maximum of intelligence and taste, not to mention an abundance of know-how and familiarity with all phases of the art and industry, that David Selznick, along with Samuel Goldwyn, Irving Thalberg, and a handful of less qualified men, helped to establish and endow with standards, traditions, and ideals.

Even though he lacked formal education (not because his father could not afford to give him as much as he wanted, but because he was too eager and impatient to get to work), the young Selznick was an avid reader and wide-eyed devotee of American and English literature. This taste and familiarity were reflected in the films he produced.

As a young producer, right after the adoption of sound and the imposition of the requirement of a certain literate quality in films, he regularly picked his story properties from the library shelves — "Anna Karenina"; "David Copperfield"; "Tale Of Two Cities"; "Little Lord Fauntleroy", says the New York Times. And his assiduously overseen productions were conspicuous for fidelity and taste.

It was his taste and much more than that — his fervor and his impassioned exercise of the creative urges of a writer and director — that dominated him during the three years of preparation and production of "Gone With the Wind." These were commanding factors in making for the richness of this film.

Dave Selznick, along with the author, Margaret Mitchell, was the parent of this screen classic. He had more to do with the making of it than anyone who worked on it.

A tendency of critics and others has been to underrate and make fun of the Hollywood producer. Very few ever tried to make sport of Dave Selznick, except to tease or joke with him about his bursting enthusiasms and his rampant energies.

On these topics, he was sometimes touchy. He had a lively sense of humor, except about himself. He didn't like to have writers trifle with his hard-earned and well-deserved reputation.

His ingrained and persistent devotion to quality in films was manifested by his establishment and maintenance of the annual giving of Golden Laurel awards to the outstanding productions of foreign countries. While he himself was not creatively disposed to the kind of moderate-cost, esoteric pictures that are generally made abroad, he admired and encouraged their production and he was as sensitive in his appreciation of the best as any writer, director, or producer in Hollywood.

In recent years, the creative producer as such has been slowly deposed and his functions absorbed into the compound of the producer-director or the producer-actor who now have their own independent companies. Only a few of the old breed — the breed that David O. Selznick personified — remain or are active. But the new class of multi-hatted film men have abiding regard for the model and the standard that he set, says the New York Times. It is not likely that his name and his achievements will soon be forgotten in notoriously short-memoried Hollywood.
